S. is a well-known painter of the old Japanese classic school, and as a son, his father has one of the finest collections of Japanese and Chinese art existing, while in China, added greatly to the collection begun by his father who was daimio, or provincial prince, of Nagasaki in the old Japanese feudal system. The collection contains many famous masterpieces.

PERSONALS.

Mrs. Palmer Woods, of Kohala, who has been ill for some time, is greatly improved.

Mrs. John Hill, of Kohala, is a visitor in the city.

A. A. Doyle, the attorney, returned from Kohala yesterday.

The arrangement of Mr. Elgin's engagement to Miss Schaefer is of great interest to Kohala society. Miss Schaefer will be a great acquisition to the district. She is an enthusiastic worker in the Woman's Club, and is also the possessor of a beautiful voice.—Kohala Midget.

DISCREDITS LAW OF LOGIC.

THE AVO, January 28.—The small boy who remarks that "there ain't no sense in studying so much grammar" commits no crime against logic. He is merely doing what millions of educated people are doing every day with probability. This is the stand taken by Prof. Otto Jespersen of the University of Copenhagen and the inventor of the new universal language. He expressed this opinion in a lecture on grammar and logic at the University of Chicago. The professor says it is not possible to determine by logic just what is correct or incorrect in the language. He declares the double organ of the human language, and that language after its logic of its own, must be studied and understood through the logic itself.
